Neighbourhood Watch

Something missing?

As part of your property security plan it is important to keep (in a safe place) an accurate record of your property. This will help police identify and return stolen property and assist with any insurance claim.

Police recommend all valuable property is identified with your personal identification code, photographed, marked, or welded. These processes are outlined in the brochure 'Property Identification' which is available from all police stations. Engravers can be borrowed from your local police station or through most Neighbourhood Watch areas. Your personal identification code must be recorded on the police computer system.

A good system is to record property room by room. Do not forget items in the garage, shed or outdoors.
