QUEENSLAND POLICE WORKING WITH LGBTI COMMUNITIES

The Queensland Police Service (QPS) is committed to ensuring policing services are accessible to all members of the community. Part of this commitment is delivering services and programs that are tailored and responsive to the needs of LGBTI communities.

The QPS LGBTI Liaison Program was established in 1997 to support the delivery of a professional, non-discriminatory, accessible policing service to LGBTI communities.

The QPS is proud of its role as a community leader for diversity and inclusion. The QPS supports and actively participates in LGBTI events such as Pride Festivals, Wear it Purple Day and International Day Against Homophobia and Transphobia (IDAHOT).

Further information about the LGBTI Liaison Program can be found by searching LGBTI on the QPS webpage at www.police.qld.gov.au

LGBTI Liaison Officers

An integral part of the LGBTI Liaison Program, is the LGBTI liaison officer.

LGBTI liaison officers promote trust and understanding between the QPS and LGBTI communities ensuring confidence in a fair and equitable policing response.

LGBTI liaison officers receive LGBTI specific training and are sensitive to the issues each community faces.

LGBTI liaison officers can support you by providing discrete, non-judgemental advice, assistance or referral for all police related matters.

LGBTI liaison officers are also called upon to use their knowledge to support police investigators in LGBTI related prejudice motivated crime, domestic violence and criminal matters.

There are over 130 LGBTI liaison officers working in police stations around the state.

Contacting an LGBTI Liaison Officer

LGBTI community members are entitled to respect and fairness when interacting with police.

LGBTI community members are encouraged to report all police related matters to their local police or via Policelink.

If however you feel more comfortable in discussing your matter with an LGBTI liaison officer, please make a request on your first contact with police or call Policelink on 131 444 who will identify a liaison officer in your local area.

A contact list of LGBTI liaison officers can also be found by searching 'LGBTI Contact Us' on the QPS webpage at www.police.qld.gov.au

Please note that LGBTI liaison officers undertake their role in addition to their usual duties. This may mean that a liaison officer may not be available at all times.
